HERBERT ROTH

TWENTY-EIGHT years ago the New Zealand Council for Educational Research decided to begin its publishing programme with a bibliography on education in New Zealand, compiled by Mary Mules and A. G. Butchers. In a second edition published in 1947 the original bibliography was rearranged, supplemented, and brought up-to-date. The authors on that occasion were Mary Redmond (nee Mules) and H. C. McQueen. Since that time striking advances have taken place in the library resources of this country; hence, although Herbert Roth initially intended only to bring the earlier bibliographies up-to-date, the present publication is in fact a completely new bibliography. Mr Roth has, of course, built upon the work of his predecessors, but the resources that he was able to command made it possible for him to go far beyond their work.

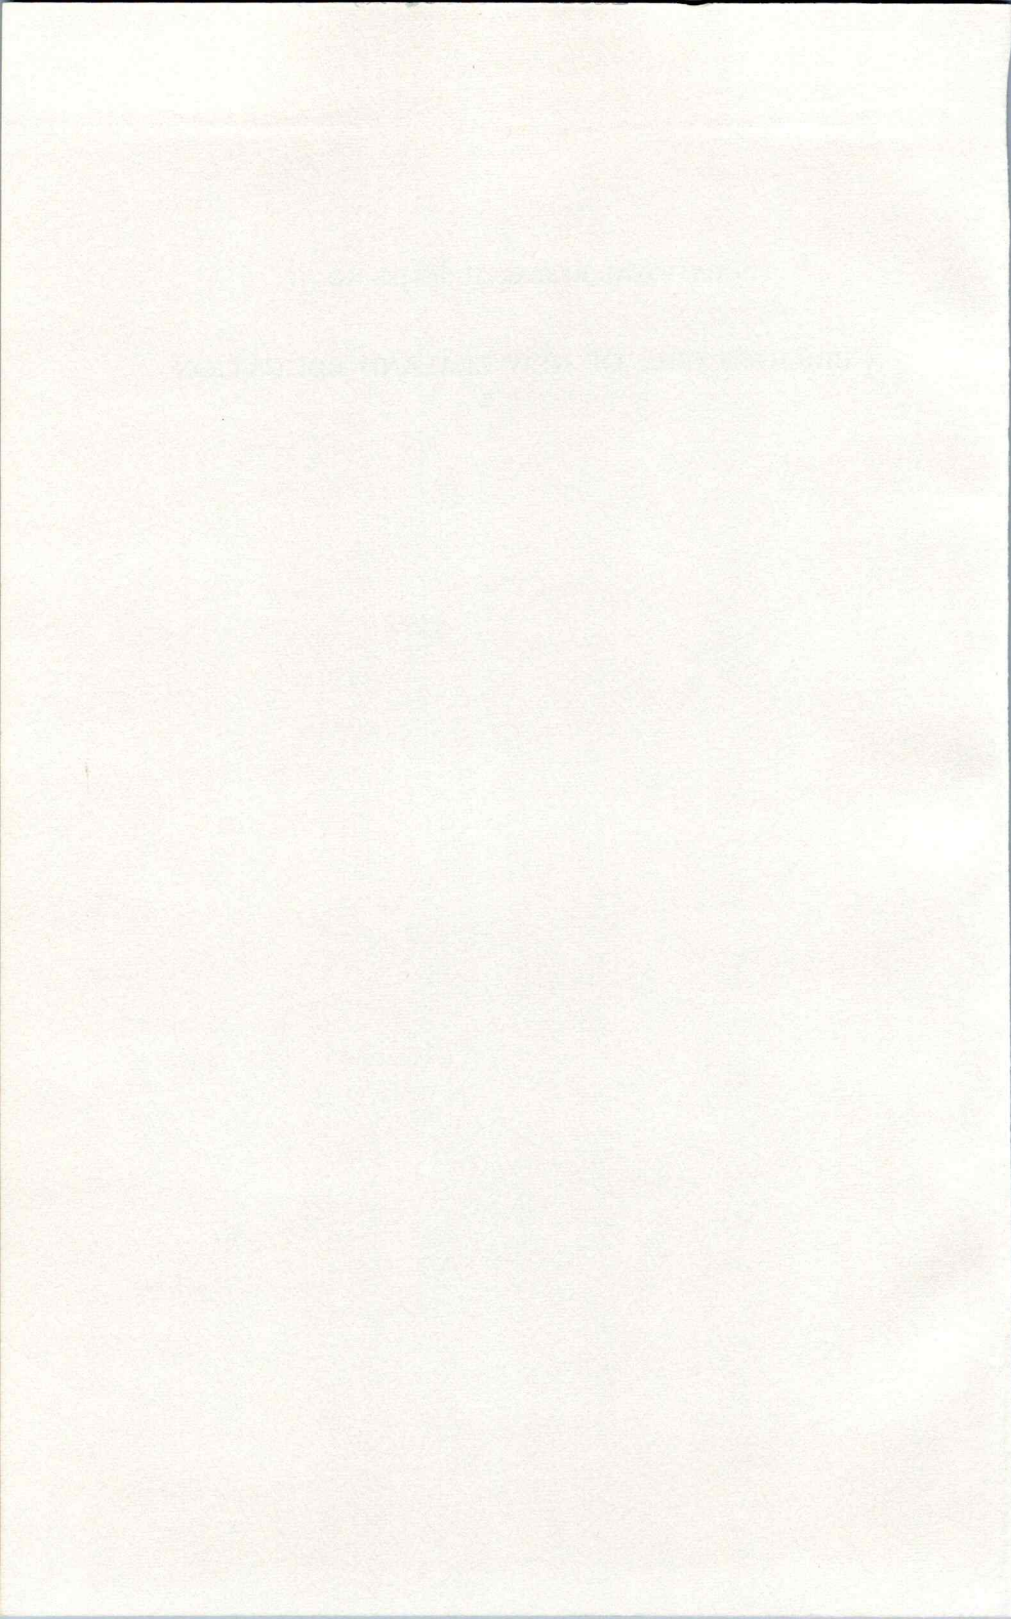

Using rigorous standards of selection, this new revision lists over 4000 references to writings on schooling in New Zealand which have appeared during the last 120 years. In addition, three comprehensive indexes to authors, schools, and subjects, and a chronological guide to regular government papers help to make it indispensable for any serious study of the country's educational development.

Preface

Originally this Bibliography of New Zealand Education was intended to be little more than a revision of earlier publications of the New Zealand Council for Educational Research, supplemented by a list compiled by Judith Jaspers for the New Zealand Library School. However, I was prevailed upon to attempt a much more comprehensive work, and as a result the present bibliography includes several important classes of material that had not been adequately covered previously. It also lists the publications in a form that more closely approximates to New Zealand library practice. The period covered is up to the end of 1961.

My aim has been to list all works published within New Zealand dealing with education, and also works on New Zealand education that have been published in other countries. I have interpreted the term 'education' in a very wide sense, and the entries extend into psychology, penology, sociology, and allied sciences. On the other hand school textbooks and school magazines have not been included, except in the case of jubilee issues of the latter that have material of historical value. Theses in education and allied subjects have been included.

Of Government publications, Statutes, and papers in the Appendices to the Journals of the House of Representatives (A. to J.), have been listed, and a chronological chart showing the evolution of the education papers in these Appendices will be found at the end of this volume. Relevant papers from the Appendices to the Journals of the Legislative Council (L.C.) and official papers, Acts, and Ordinances of the ten former Provincial Governments are also included. Statutory Regulations are not listed, except insofar as they have been published separately by the Department of Education. Other official publications not included in this volume, but of value to research students, are the N.Z. Parliamentary Debates, the N.Z. Gazette, the official Gazettes of the Provinces, and the volumes of Bills Thrown Out preserved at the General Assembly Library.

I have sought to list all educational journals published in New Zealand as well as relevant articles about New Zealand education in overseas journals. Since 1940 an annual Index of New Zealand Periodicals has been published, and I have in general not included articles that would be included in this. However, I have listed pre-1940 articles in several major publications such as the Transactions of the New Zealand Institute (now the Royal Society of New Zealand), the New Zealand Journal of Science, the New Zealand Journal of Science and Technology, and the Reports of the meetings of the Australasian Association for the Advancement of Science (now the Australian and New Zealand Association for the Advancement of Science). A small number of newspaper articles of historical interest have also been listed, and a few mimeographed publications that appear to have considerable permanent value.

The subject classification adopted is much more detailed than that of previous bibliographies. Ideally, a bibliographer should personally examine each item before assigning it to its place; but this has not been possible, and in some cases the allocation has almost been based on guess-work. I shall be glad to have my attention drawn to any errors of classification that readers may be able to point out, and, of course, I shall welcome information concerning works that I should have included had I known of them.

My thanks are due to colleagues in the library profession who patiently answered my inquiries and allowed me to roam freely through their collections; to my predecessors in this field on whose work I have built, Mrs Mary Redmond, Dr A. G. Butchers, Mr H. C. McQueen, and Miss Judith Jaspers; to the staff of the NZCER who were mainly responsible for the classification and arrangement of the entries; and, most of all, to Mr A. G. Bagnall and his staff of the Bibliographical Section of the National Library Centre, whose comprehensive Bibliography of New Zealand Publications (soon to appear in print) I found indispensable in compiling this work.

Finally I should like to express my sincere thanks to Mr G. C. Palliser who undertook the exacting preparatory work in the compilation of the three indexes that will be indispensable to the users of this bibliography.

HERBERT ROTH, an Austrian by birth, came to New Zealand in 1940, spent three years in the RNZAF, and after the war he completed an arts degree at the Victoria University of Wellington. In 1947 he was awarded the Diploma of the New Zealand Library School, and he has worked in libraries ever since: in the National Library Service in Wellington, and more recently at the University of Auckland where he now holds the position of Deputy Librarian.

Mr Roth is also the author of a biographical study of George Hogben, one of the country's outstanding early educational administrators, published by the NZCER in 1952.
